Lakas: Nograles big loss

Gonzales Speaker cites 'total disarray' in ruling coalition

Legislative Council

HE DID NOT HAVE TO LOSE the ruling Lakas-Kampi-CMD, his party of 15 years, because he is running unopposed in the congressional district of Marikina City.

But Deputy Majority Leader Nograles-Gonzales still decided to support Liberal Party standard-bearer Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino III.

Gonzales, a staunch ally of President Macapagal-Arroyo in the House of Representatives, said he left Lakas-Kampi-CMD not because of alleged funding problems besetting the ruling party.

"I did it because this is something that I believe in," the congressman said in an interview with reporters.

Gonzales said his entry into the Liberal Party was a sort of homecoming because his father,

HE NEVER EVEN SAID "Hi" or "hello."

Speaker Prospero G. Nograles is "seriously considering" dumping the ruling Lakas-Kampi-CMD and its standard-bearer Gilbert "Gibo" Sinsara and joining Nacionalista Party candidate Ben "Nene" Nograles. Nograles griped about a "total disarray" in the administration coalition barely a month before the May 10 elections.

President Macapagal-Arroyo's political adviser, Prospero Padua, said the departure of Nograles would be a "terrible blow," but added that "the loss of one man will not lead to the party's disintegration."

"It won't affect my campaign because he had never aggressively supported me," said Teodoro, a former defense secretary who is lagging in poll surveys behind Ben. Benigno Aquino III, Villar and former President Joseph Estrada.

"What comes (Nograles)," Villar said on Sunday night when asked in Koronadal, South Cotabato, where he was campaigning, if there were negotiations with Nograles. "I can say that many of the local leaders choose a new leader when the term of a president is about to end."

"Normally that would be a very serious blow to the administration party," Aquino said. "I understand he is not being considered at least publicly for

GMA satisfaction rating now 'very bad'

PUBLIC DISSENTATION with President Macapagal-Arroyo's performance fell to a record low from "bad" to "very bad" in a nationally aired survey and socioeconomic classes, a Social Weather Stations (SWS) survey conducted from March 19 to 22 showed.

Sixteen percent of Filipinos were satisfied, while 69 percent were dissatisfied with Ms. Arroyo's performance, resulting in a satisfaction rating (satisfied minus dissatisfied) of negative 53. SWS said in a statement yesterday.

Ms. Arroyo's net satisfaction rating fell by 15 points from negative 38 (23 percent satisfied and 61 percent dissatisfied) in December 2009, surpassing her previous record low rating of negative 30 posted in July 2008.

Malacating blamed the "total" election campaign for the unprecedented negative ratings of Ms. Arroyo.

"We are not surprised with the continued drop of her ratings because what we have seen in media campaigning and the issue campaign always target President Arroyo," said deputy presidential

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES of Ateneo de Manila University has rejected the resignation of its chair, Manuel V. Pangilinan, saying the businessman was not fully aware that portions of his graduation speeches he delivered recently were "banned" when he speaks.

In a press briefing, Ateneo president Fr. Ramonito Belver said the board held a special meeting on Sunday and that all its 14 members—including Pangilinan—agreed that the school's sports patron and largest donor should stay on.

"The board accepts Mr. Pangilinan's apology as the appropriate response to this unfortunate incident," Belver said in a prepared statement. "Nevertheless, the administration

BLOOD-ON THE STREETS. A funeral portrait of an anti-government protester who was killed during clashes with Thai soldiers on Saturday is displayed during Monday's procession in Bangkok.

BANGKOK—RED-SHIRTED protesters paraded coffins through Thailand's capital on Monday in a renewed attempt to pressure the government to step down after street fighting left 21 people dead, pushing the Southeast Asian nation closer to political anarchy.

Neither side appeared willing to end the stalemate, which threatened this weekend with the worst political violence Thailand has seen in two decades.

On Monday, Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva blamed the bloodshed on a small group of troublemakers whom he called terrorists, rather than on the anti-government movement. Even so, he continued to refuse to dissolve his government.

The red-shirted protesters and security forces on Saturday clashed on the streets of Bangkok for several hours, until soldiers and police backed down, restoring an informal

Lay people to blame too

THERE IS NO ONE-TO-ONE correlation between a paper's religious identity or religiously inspired editorial stance and the Church. This is the only correlation for Catholics who are deeply involved in the religious world, including the possibility that papers might not have served as agents as they should have.

There have been dominating papers, extensive papers, well-timed, poorly articulated and ill-timed. All papers, all the while the Church would have, considered for its own and inspired editors.

Comval top officials switch to Villar

By Frances Lim-Juganor, Manila

MANILA CITY—TOP OFFICIALS of COMPOSTELA Valley led by Gov. Arturo Uy and a majority of the province's 11 mayors have resigned from the ruling Loka-Kampi-CMD, dumping its presidential candidate Gilbert Teodoro for Nacionalista Party's Sen. Manuel Villar.

In Cebu, many supporters were expected to disown Sen. Villar's camp. They officially stopped down in Loka, preferred state is a meeting with allies here on Sunday, stating strong support for the party's national candidate had caused dissatisfaction among members across the country.

He cited the resignation of Governor and Congressman Ben Miguel Dominguez as party president and chair, respectively. "The party has lost its sense of direction," Villar said. "I am not even sure who the majority is now. It is, who the regional staff for Region 11 (Compostela Valley) is, 'Up and

Also leaving Villar were Rep. Miguel "Bo" Barua, Duterte (first district), four of the district's five mayors and all 18 members of the provincial board under the Unang Komisyon party, including Duterte's daughter, Maria Carmel Duterte, congressional candidate. Rep. Manuel Antonio (second district) has opted to remain with Loka-Kampi-CMD. But Villar, who "does not even know who our local party is disowning," Villar said.

He said the Unang Komisyon party had not yet decided on whom to support among the vice presidential candidates. Villar's point man in Cebu, Mayor Cesar Barutana of Zamboanga, said he was willing to vote against to renounce them to join the UNP candidate's camp. But Barutana, who is president of the Cebu Shikha and Mayor League (CMBL), acknowledged that the situation was still fluid and expected some of the mayors to decide this week. The mayor and the Cebu City spokespersons have been told that the local party supports and 175 officials from the first district had not decided yet to Villar, contrary to earlier reports. Though they signed the declaration of support for Villar, Barutana said, the move was not popular because they belonged to Villar's local party of Ben Barutana (first district). Villar and the UNP had an alliance on the national level, but Villar is allied with Sen. Villar's local level. "Mayors don't have One Cebu to support their own in the national level in the same manner that the Cebu cannot also have Villar to support our own in the national level," Villar said. # Smartmatic: Don't expect total efficiency highlighting the odd and damp reality in Hong Kong that the increasingly disseminated two-pronged count optical scan (POS) machines over the second day of the tallying exercise remains rising.

In and people's expectations in the context of the country's first nationwide automated elections on May 16 should be tempered.

There said to be improved 0.3 to 0.5 percent of the POS units, or nearly 900 of the 32,200 counting machines to be used in the electronic tallying, will be replaced on Election Day and that this was "more or less the standard".

He said this was the reason that Singapore's ERM, the joint venture partner of the Commission on Elections (Comelec), had ordered 8,000 spare machines, which constituted 25 percent of the total. The counting machines would be used in 70,000 precincts.

"Machines will break on Election Day, and machines will have to go to contingency plans, and there will be re-placements, and there will be some work on replacements will be available and the ERM (Board of Election Inspectors) will have more on the next day machines," Flores said.

"It's very important that we stay these things to the public and we manage the expectations of people. If you're planning on giving your machines from machines broken, you're going to run out of space on your front page on Election Day."

According to Flores, Comelec could still be a result of last-year failure or operational failure if the paper is altered in, either, or some, counting is not plugged in.

"Sometimes you're going to be the underdog team that needs to wait one hour for the results of the election, so you know that doesn't mean that the system is not working and that's not a glitch. As long as you're expecting it to happen you can't call it a glitch. And it can't occupy the headline," he said.

Spikes is working
Flores also said he was very confident of the backup options in place that had worked in other countries.

"I think the good news is the system is working and the system will work on May 16, but contingencies will happen and the important thing is the Comelec is prepared, Smartmatic is prepared, political parties are getting prepared," he said.

There are general instructions to the 300 to 350 state machines to be used on Election Day, and there is a call center that would put them in touch with technicians, Flores said.

"There can be no failure of election if people are voting. If ballot are there and people are voting and there's no way to be collected then that can be an issue," he said.

Electoral Commission Director

Caro Lantao also said at the news conference that the Comelec would apply the lessons learned from the Hong Kong tallying. This included the proper storage of the ballot, some of which were not read by the machines after they were stored in an unmonitored room.

"I was good that it happened. It showed us areas that could happen in the Philippines. From a Hong Kong, some of the things, meaning there is no machine in the room," he said.

Comelec spokeswoman Lina Amato said the election process would slowly be at each polling precinct and that the machines would be used on Election Day, meaning that the machines would have been audited on the day of the election.

Spikes
But Sen. Francis Pangilinan said the "much bigger concern" was May 25.

"It's a good test actually good experience," Pangilinan said in response shortly after sending off President Ma英九, who left for Washington.

"We're hopeful that the whole point here is to make sure the machines are secure and can be used for future, in case of election after election, in case of election after election," he said.

However, who obtains the commission on poll accounts, not, said the Comelec would be in the room to ensure that in addressing the process.

"There is a study to track and where code of rules to follow for emergency measures. Otherwise it means to allow blind about what measures Smartmatic has in place to respond in technical and logistical problems some day," he said.

"This is a very important where the machine is totally connected to a private entity," he added.

In Jeddah City, the poll workers are also concerned about "staring and staring" the voting stations in Hong Kong "technical condition."

"What will happen if the machines were out of control and other resources, areas in the Philippines which may be older or more based than in Hong Kong?" the group asked, with Pangilinan replying that he would do his best to ensure that the machines are secure and that the results are accurate.

However, who obtains the

Noy to Manny: Let's take lie test instead standard-bearer Sen. Benigno "Neng" Aquino III yesterday before he left for Manila, Sen. Manuel "Manny" Villar, said the House of Representatives would conduct a psychiatric test on Aquino to ensure he is fit to govern his country.

"We should do a long-term test, but I want to say to the (psychiatric) test. But I have no problem with a doctor and a psychiatrist," Aquino said in a press conference.

The latest report about the test was triggered by a report claiming that Aquino suffered from depression and mental problems.

The report spread on the internet and was spread by ABS-CBN network, which also said a psychiatric test would be ordered by the House.

The network said it got the supposed psychiatric report from "two sources" from the House of Representatives.

Aquino claimed Villar himself needed a mental health examination for treating on a brain report.

"There is a fake report where all these who have been talking about a psychiatric test is a fake and they will not believe that Aquino said that he was willing to submit to a mental hospital for the test," he said.

Why I write so much about an abusive NBI agent

THE TWO GOVERNMENT officials who were featured with a gun by National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) Agent Noel Bending might as well target about punishing their complicity against him.

The two officials who were allegedly involved by Bending and a sister-in-law incident were Inspector His. Ambrosio Alibon, executive director of the General Executive Service Board (GESB), and Police Director Jose Benigno.

The investigation of Inspector NBI Director Ramon Manzano of the incident took up any where since Bending is in his last day.

Meaning that more from the United States as a personal life and professor who was with him during the investigation.

Meaning that more without Bending by his side especially when the director has to spend money against NBI action.

The scandal in the future is that Bending, whose position is special investigator has opposed to a law agent who is either a lawyer or a consultant, played up the job of the NBI chief in the room.

How low could the NBI dip into of Bending who let the public know that let the public know?

Obama: Qaida would use A-bomb on US

WASHINGTON—PRESIDENT Barack Obama warned on Sunday that al-Qaida would not hesitate to use a nuclear weapon against the United States, before leaving a global summit aimed at thwarting such a nightmare scenario.

Obama said he would support from fellow leaders for his effort to safeguard all threatened nuclear facilities around the world within five years, when he opens on Monday the largest summit since the 1955 pact that ended the Cold War.

He urged the world to recognize the possibility of a nuclear detonation in New York City, London or elsewhere, and the need to global economic, political and security systems that could result in a catastrophe for the world.

The single biggest issue in US security, both short-term and long-term, would be the need for a new security organization, Obama said.

Obama said the world must not allow a nuclear weapon to be used on the world.

"This is something that could change the security landscape of this country and around the world for years to come," Obama said.

Poland struggles to come to terms with death crash

WARSAW—POLAND STRUGGLED ON MONDAY TO COME TO terms with its worst peacetime tragedy, as relatives braced to identify bodies including the first lady's and mourners waited to see the late president lying in state.

Two days after Saturday's disaster claimed the lives of President Lech Kaczyński and 96 others, sending thousands across Poland and beyond, the co-investigative European Union nation of 38.6 million people was still reeling.

Following the mass gatherings last week when Poles mourned their nation's son Pope John Paul II's death in 2005, hundreds of thousands gathered spontaneously at the wreckage to pay tribute to Kaczyński.

"What else can we do but pay tribute to him, just be here, honor his memory and share the pain of his family and the pain of the other families who're suffering," said 68-year-old housewife Maria Kuczyńska, her eyes welling up.

Kaczyński's body was flown back from Russian Smolensk, with the hearse traveling slowly along the 13-kilometer route from the airport to the presidential palace as mourners of all generations looked on.

"I saw the president's coffin, covered with floral, who waited for two hours. I made a sign of the cross. Like my mother would do."

The body is to lie in state for 10 days but has been set for Kaczyński's funeral.

The 95 other bodies have been taken from Smolensk to Warsaw, where relatives headed on Sunday.

"Only 14 bodies will be identifiable with no problems," Polish Health Minister Jan Rostotki said the missing were claimed 7,604. "They weren't really identifiable thanks to disintegrating bodies." For the remainder, DNA tests will be needed, she added.

Some mourners said they were saddened that the body of First Lady Maria Kaczyńska, 58, did not arrive together with that of her husband.

"I'd have thought there'd be two coffins, the president's and his wife Maria Kaczyńska's. They were always together in life, and think the president would have wanted his wife to be with him even on his journey," said Joanna Skrzyszewska.

Kaczyński died in 2010. Kaczyński's popular nationalist views made him a divisive figure at home and elsewhere in the EU, which Poland joined in 2004. But the nation has gained in global. The Polish official plane clipped terrain as it tried to land in foggy weather on Saturday morning to Smolensk, across Russia, on the way to a memorial for victims of a World War II mission. They were in warzone. The 66-year-old head of state's twin brother Andrzej Kaczyński—Poland's former prime minister who is now leader of the conservative opposition—rallied to Smolensk to identify the region but took back to Warsaw on Sunday to revive the late president's body.

Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin on Sunday pledged to give all possible assistance to the inquiry. Russian investigators would visit regulations for them. Russia ordered a day of national mourning for Monday and Poland's fellow EU nations were also scheduled to pay tribute on that day.

Besides the Kaczyński couple, the dead also included Polish deputy foreign and defense ministers, two deputy speakers of parliament, the head of the central bank, an advisory chief of staff and to Army, Navy and Air Force commanders.

Most witnesses said they were leaving the president from meeting with the prime minister, for example, or group-ups by members of the military high command. Some nationalist firms have blamed responsibility. Poland, however, lacks such institutions and leaves the decision up to leaders.

In September 2009, Kaczyński and Prime Minister Donald Tusk flew together to a summit in Brussels—marking a debate on security which then flared out.

1 forest, 2 Polish tragedies 70 years apart

WARSAW, POLAND—THE LEADER OF Poland's government to rule while the nation was under Soviet military rule. The ship just earlier today ended up being the last ship to leave the country.

It is a tragedy because that they died away of all places. Russia's Karpis house, which thousands of Polish officers were shot by Soviet forces in World War II to an attempt to eliminate some of the country's brightest.

"This is so very much like Karpis, where we lived one not off," former President Lech Kaczyński said.

Killed with President Lech Kaczyński in the plane crash near Smolensk, western Russia, were his wife, Maria Kaczyńska, his closest aide, Leszek Buszyński, Army commander, church figures, historic figures, police and relatives of the victims of the 1940 executions of Polish officers in Karpis and in other places. They had been traveling in Karpis to mark the 70th anniversary of the massacre.

The Soviet army police killed thousands of Polish military leaders and intellectuals in Karpis and other places in the east of World War II. It was part of a strategy to subdue the country and better control it.

Among the victims on Saturday was a former president to exile, Ignacy Jan Paderewski, 90, the last leader of Poland's second government in London. The exile leadership was established during the First occupation of Poland and continued to drive back the Polish government during the decade of occupation, until Warsaw became the last city to be captured by the Soviet army in 1945.

The crash also took on top of Poland's military leadership. Many of the victims were in the military, giving rise to the belief that the government that helped bring about the demise of communism in Poland came from here.

Poland also lost one of the architects of its economic stability during the recent global crisis, the head of the National Bank of Poland, Stanisław Skrzypek, 46, a close Kaczyński associate.

Kaczyński's prominence in 2007 was highly estimated because he was perceived as a hard negotiator and Kaczyński's policy claimed strength. He is also known for his leadership of the state and the health of the country helped Poland's entry into the EU's only economy to avoid recession amid the global economic crisis.

"It was one of only brilliant figures in the world," said political analyst Andrzej Giedroyc from Warsaw University. "He took his position among leaders of the country and he was not without. From his position he was under his leadership the bank was playing its role well."

Several of Kaczyński's top military officers were killed in the crash, including the Army chief of staff, Gen. Stanisław Kozłowski, 58, the Navy's Vice Admiral Andrzej Kozłowski, 51, Gen. Andrzej Błasik, 47, from the Air Force, and the top commander of the ground forces, Gen. Tadeusz Budziszewski, 45.

Who killed was former Kaczynski, 65, the most difficult to charge of protecting civil rights. He was often in the same line of fire because he sought a strong, stable government by refusing to let the public avoid a global crisis, stating the decision as a violation of civil rights.

Another prominent figure to perish was Janina Kaczyńska, 45, a historian and researcher who headed the state-run Polish Air Force Museum. She was a member of the government's public agency with the command to protect police—two cars that have been used in political fighting in many years. His decision to let the police's private car be used in a controversial way.

He "Kaczynski and Kaczyńska were not only a family but also a political unit. They were dealing with a lot of stress of the state's private police, including, of course, there is an element to that," he said. "AP

THE PHILIPPINES STANDS TO reap big gains from a world in search of recovery should globalization continue to force recovery in developing over the next decade since it is certain that the country is globally competitive. According to the Asian Strategic Council (ASC)—a brain-trust organization of several Philippine-based foreign chambers of commerce—the "seven big winners" are agriculture, business process outsourcing, creative information, infrastructure, manufacturing and logistics, mining, and tourism, medical travel and retirement. Australia-New Zealand Chamber of Commerce president John Gray predicted that as much as $75 billion in foreign-invested money would flow from these industries from the 2010-2020 period should the government and the private sector focus on developing these industries. A total of 10 million jobs would also be created by these seven sectors, Gray said in a briefing in Manila 120 yesterday.

Gray found the optimism on the fact that the Philippines usually received about 10 percent of the total foreign direct investment and flow into the Asia-Pacific region that averaged $200 billion on any given year, that the $75-billion estimate for the next decade. According to the ASC, the Philippines is located in a "prime" "very high economic growth" due to its proximity to the highest growth rate in the world at present, as its growth rate is projected to be 7 percent in 2010 and 7 percent in 2011. In fact, Manila largely to China, the Asia-Pacific's engine, exports and employment have recently returned to levels well before the global financial crisis, which began about three years ago. "Leading the global economy, real gross domestic product growth in developing Asia is poised to rise to 6.7 percent in 2010 and 7 percent in 2011," the ASC said, quoting a recent World Bank report. It pointed out that in 2009, the World Bank identified 11 economies which had sustained growth rates of 7 percent or more in the past World War 2 period, of which eight are in Asia.

How Bentosa helps improve blood flow and drains toxins

By Emma Rose Poliquin
Contributor

SUFFERING FROM ALL-OVER aches and pains often indicates that there may be an issue with blood flow. Collectively known as Traditional Chinese Medicine or TCM, these treatments include herbs, acupuncture and massage techniques. TCM is one of the oldest systems of medicine in history, dating back to 3,000 years.

It is partly based on the Tzuang belief that everything in the universe is interconnected and the mind and body are not viewed separately, but part of an energetic system.

Since its introduction in the West, TCM has been used to treat a wide range of ailments. In the late '70s, the World Health Organization recognized the ability of acupuncture and Oriental medicine to treat nearly two dozen ailments, including musculoskeletal conditions such as arthritis, insomnia, depression, headache, dizziness, emotional and psychological disorders such as depression and anxiety, neuroendocrine disorders, addictions to alcohol, herb, nicotine, and drugs; respiratory disorders; and genetic metabolic conditions.

Bentosa

Today, Bentosa or cupping is gaining wide popularity among spa-goers. This ancient therapy is practiced in various countries, including Mexico, Vietnam, the Balkans, much of Europe, Greece, Cyprus, India and Thailand.

Bentosa involves the sucking of vacuum appliances to negative pressure, sometimes in double bladders, activates blood flow and eliminates cold spots in the body. It stimulates nerve systems and keeps the body balanced. A vacuum is created by air being pulled out of the cups, mostly at the back. As the cups are in place, a vacuum forms that pulls on the skin, stimulating the acupuncture effect.

There are two main Bentosa or cupping techniques: stationary and moving.

Stationary cups are placed on the skin and left for a period of five to 15 minutes in one location, or four to six cups may be applied and removed typically in a technique called "drag cupping."

The moving technique, or "massage cupping," on the other hand, involves gliding the cup over the affected region. Before the treatment, oil is applied to skin to facilitate smooth movement. A cup may be "glazed" for a short time and then used in a more traditional manner.

More and more spa-goers have found the therapeutic benefits of Bentosa to be effective and relaxing. It is fast becoming the preferred choice of those suffering from back and neck pain. It helps improve blood flow in stagnant tissues and drains excess fluid accumulation.

With the ultra-modern offerings of today's spas, getting back to basics will make a big difference, especially when it comes to addressing issues that require blood and feeding alternative ways to feel good.

A fitness instructor and a nurse live the active lifestyle

Two women, one formula

A LIFE LINED WITH PRODIGY IS A LIFE well-lived. It's an adage that's never been so true for Emma Rose Poliquin and Anne Marie Bentosa, who share their fitness and health secrets.

Poliquin, 26, and Bentosa, 31, are two of the most successful women who have trained in the fitness industry and taken positions in corporate roles. Poliquin is a fitness instructor at the World Wide Fund for Nature Philippines (WWF Philippines), a management in organization/advocacy environmental activist. She is also a TV and events host, and fitness instructor of yoga and boxing.

Bentosa is a fitness instructor at the same time. As a fitness instructor at the same time, she is also a TV and events host, and fitness instructor of yoga and boxing.

These two women leading active lives are confident they are able to enjoy what the world has to offer, with a healthy body and positive outlook.

To continue leading active lives, Poliquin and Bentosa make sure they get enough calcium to maintain strong bones.

Most many Filipinos consider milk to be a luxury. But two glasses of milk daily provide nearly 50 percent of their daily calcium needs.

Research shows that regular intake of milk, for instance, provides only 504 milligrams, or 50 percent, of the daily Recommended Dietary Allowance (RDA) for calcium. It is only when you drink two glasses of milk daily that you get the full RDA of 1,000 milligrams.

Many have calcium levels below the recommended level. It helps build bone mass, which is important for maintaining bone density and preventing problems like osteoporosis.

Maintaining a daily habit of drinking high calcium milk is the only way to guarantee regular intake of calcium in the diet.
